

I am extremely concerned with the direction the Anglican Church is going. The church (any church), should be a conduit for the Word of God, not society and it's changing norms. This is the beginning of the destruction of Christianity. God is ever constant and His Word does not change.

Where in Scriptures does God condone the blessing of same-sex marriage? There are many extremely clear references in both the Old and New Testaments, which many others have quoted in their responses to this question, to what God has ordained as Marriage – one man and one woman. In my opinion, we should welcome ALL people into our Christian midst, but to go against God to give a Christian blessing to a same-sex union and call it “marriage” is abhorrent to God and His Son. Those in authority over the church will be held accountable for their actions, on this question and all others. They need our sincere, heart-felt prayers.

If a same-sex couple wants to be joined together, they have the option of a civil ceremony, providing them with the tax and societal benefits that non-same-sex couples enjoy. The church should NOT be bowing to political correctness, but Christ correctness.

Where can people who want a safe haven from the bombardments of sin go if they cannot expect the Scriptures to be upheld by the church? Yes, we have all sinned and come short of the glory of God, but hopefully we can be directed by our Heavenly Father, through His spokespersons in the Church, in the way that we should go to draw closer to Him.
